THE SLEEPING BEAUTY

DODD, MEAD AND COMPANY NEW YORK

183729

7 - 44

ONG, long ago, in ancient times, there lived a King and Queen, — And for the blessing of a child their longing sore had been; At last, a little daughter fair, to their great joy, was given, And to the christening feast they made, they bade the Fairies seven—

But said, that in the future years the Princess young should die, By pricking of a spindle-point—ah, woeful prophecy!
But now, a kind young Fairy, who had waited to the last, [are past; Stepped forth, and said, "No, she shall sleep till a hundred years "And then she shall be wakened by a King's son—truth I tell—"And he will take her for his wife, and all will yet be well."

In vain in all her father's Cou In vain in all the country-side For in a lonely turret high, a There lives an ancient woma Ine Princess found her out of Alas! the spindle pricked her he spinning-wheel's forbid e spindles sharp are hid; '

And down she falls in death-like sleep: they lay her on her bed, And all around her sink to rest—a palace of the dead! And all around her sink to rest—a palace of the dead.

A hundred years pass—still they sleep, and all around the place who still turns her wheel with A wood of thorns has risen up—no path a man can trace that any, and tried to learn to spin;

At last, a King's son, in the hunt, asked how long it had stood, and—the charm had entered in! And what old towers were those he saw above the ancient wood.

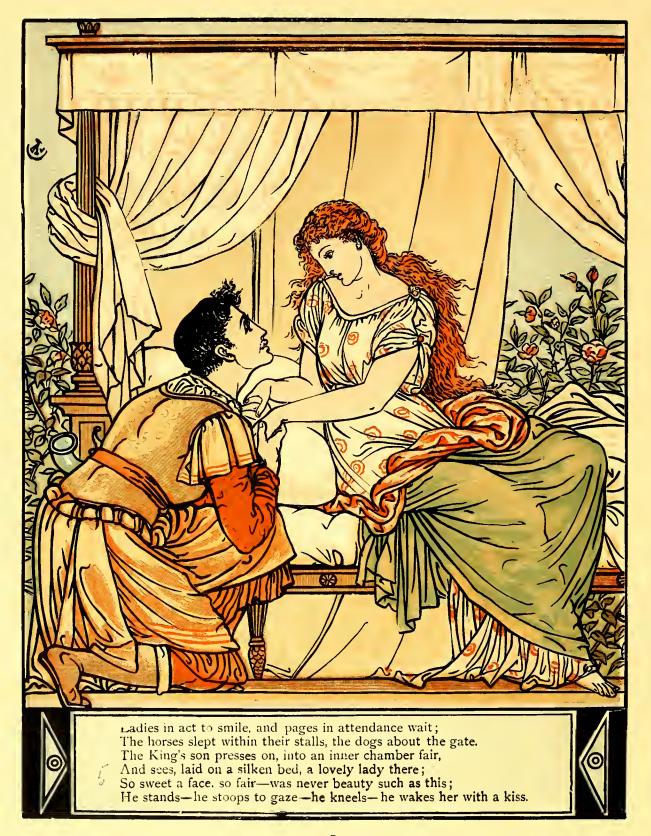

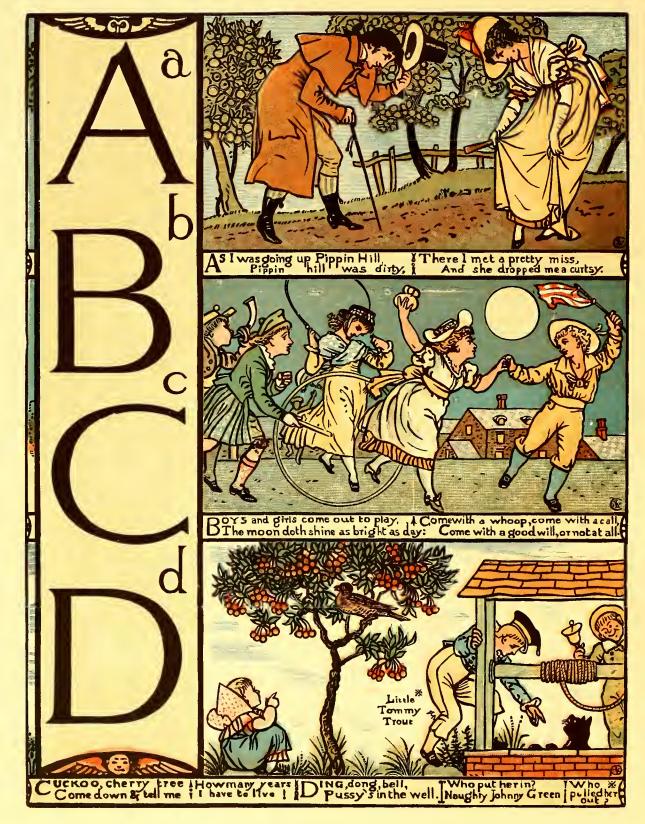

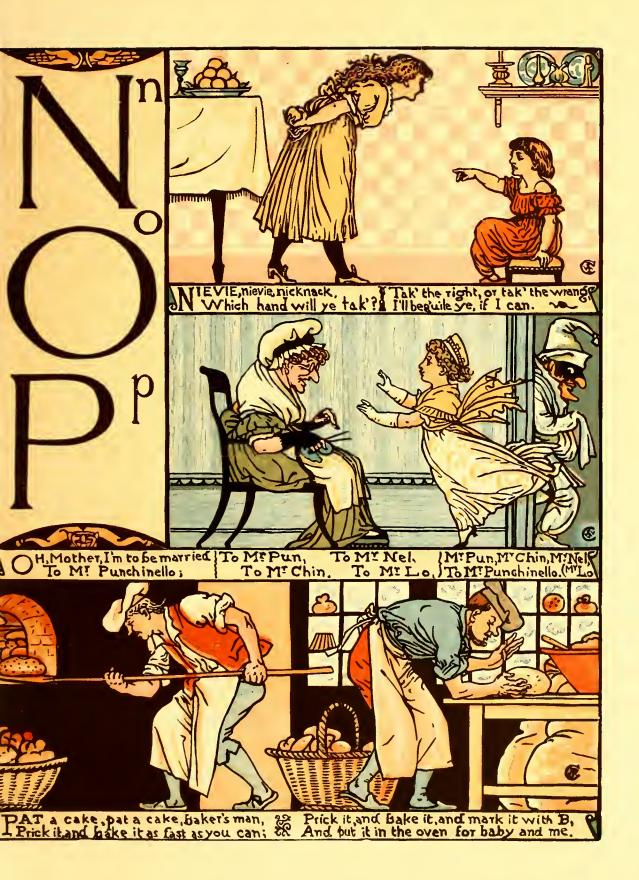

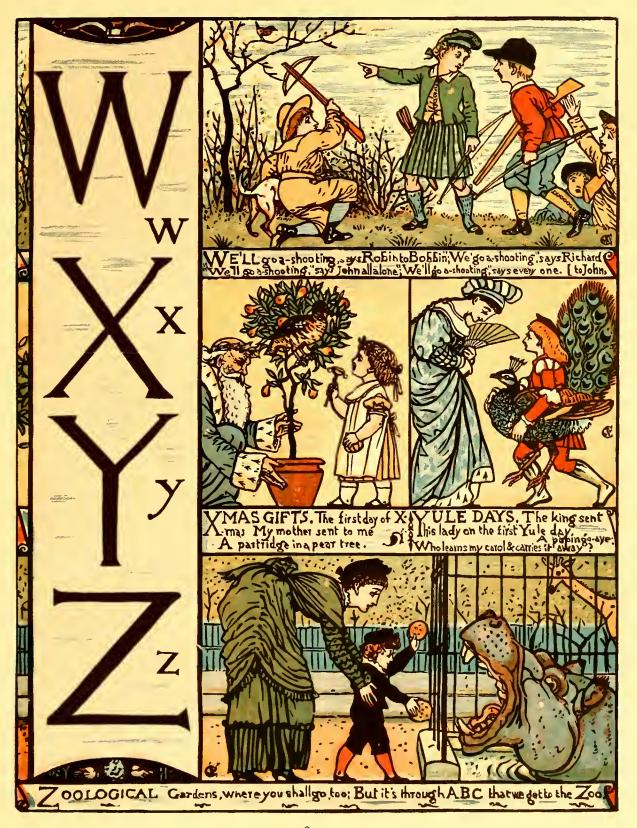

4
			А

		2

			•
4	•

